Social science faculty members are award-winning scholars and teachers who are committed to mentoring students. Under the guidance of LAS faculty members, students can study the causes of violence and the politics of violence prevention in society; examine the social and political effects of online journalism and social media; learn about the relationship between mood and anxiety disorders and the development of clinical assessment skills; and much more.

For more information about our outstanding and dedicated faculty members, visit las.uic.edu/faculty.

Learn more about the social sciences at LAS including curriculum, advising, support, and scholarship opportunities:

las.uic.edu/prospective 312-996-0301
lasinfo@uic.edu

LIBERAL ARTS AND SCIENCES ARE YOU IN?

fb.com/UIC.LAS @UICLAS
UICLibArtsSciences
instagram.com/UICLAS
The Liberal Arts and Sciences Undergraduate Research Initiative (LASURI) supports faculty-student research partnerships and provides financial support for students.

Undergraduate research experience can strengthen application to graduate and professional schools, as well as enhance a résumé. Recent projects include topics such as the neurobiology of learning and memory, neighborhoods and crime, the effect of gender in science and math disciplines, and the economic, policy, and environmental determinants of health behavior, including tobacco and alcohol use.

UIC’s College of Liberal Arts and Sciences (LAS) offers strong and highly-respected programs in the social sciences. Students majoring in a social science at LAS also benefit from a broad liberal arts and sciences foundation, which includes coursework in their major as well as in the sciences, humanities, and interdisciplinary programs.

Recent social science course offerings include topics such as medical anthropology, criminology, the sociology of youth, forensic science, health economics, Latinos in Chicago, the Constitution and civil liberties, and abnormal psychology.

To learn more about areas of study in the social sciences, visit las.uic.edu/study.

Majors & Minors
- African American Studies
- Anthropology
- Communication
- Criminology, Law, and Justice
- Economics
- Gender and Women’s Studies
- German with Business Minor
- Geography*
- Global Asian Studies* (minor)
- Human Capital and Labor Markets*
- International Studies*
- Latin American and Latino Studies
- Law and Society*
- Linguistics*
- Political Science
- Psychology
- Social Justice*
- Sociology
- Spanish-Economics
- Teaching of History

*minor only

Internships
Social science majors are encouraged to pursue internship opportunities, which provide work experience and professional connections. Social science majors have recently interned at:
- The Field Museum
- U.S. State Department
- Edelman Public Relations
- U.S. Secret Service
- Amnesty International
- Comcast SportsNet
- Chicago Council on Global Affairs
- NBC/Telemundo
- Make-A-Wish Foundation
- Howard Brown Health Center
- Cook County Juvenile Probation

Through the LAS Internship Program, students earn college credit while they develop important work skills.

Study Abroad
UIC’s Study Abroad Office offers over 200 programs in more than 50 countries. Study abroad experiences can be a life-changing part of your LAS education. LAS’s Applied Psychology program includes a one-semester intensive internship experience called Fieldwork in Psychology. Students in a recent course studied abroad in Paris, France while completing social service internships.